

A week with PCSO Jo

On Monday morning, PCSO Jo walked through the village

"My job is to keep everyone safe and make sure our village is a happy place to live."

"Sometimes," Jo said gently, "people forget to make kind or safe choices."

They were laughing, shouting, and having lots of fun.
Mrs Green is upset with the noise.

PCSO Jo walked over.
"It looks like you're having fun," she said warmly.
"But some people are trying to relax."

Off they went to the park, where they could laugh and run without disturbing anyone.

Flower pots around the village had been moved to funny places!

Two children began to giggle.
"We were playing treasure hunt," they admitted.

The children looked sorry.
"Let's put them back together," Jo suggested

On Thursday, Jo saw a child flicking small stones near the road.

The child's eyes widened. "I didn't think of that."
"That's okay," said Jo. "Now you know."

The children made bright signs and put them up in the park. Now everyone knew where it was safe to play.

On Friday, PCSO Jo invited all the children to the village hall. "I am so proud of you," she said. "You've learned how to make kind and safe choices this week."

At the weekend, the children talked to their families. "PCSO Jo helps people!" they said. "She keeps us safe!" "She teaches us how to make good choices!"
