PCSO Sam & PCSO Aisha Police Tour

One sunny day, Officer Sam and Officer Aisha took the children on a special trip to the police station.

At the front desk, Sergeant Brown smiled. "Welcome!
This is where we help people every day."

Next, they met the Neighbourhood Policing Team. "We work in your community and keep everyone safe," an officer said.

Upstairs, CID showed them how detectives look for clues, just like super-sleuths!

In the dog kennels, a police dog named Rex wagged his tail.
The dog handler showed how he could sit and stay.

Then they visited the stables. Big, gentle police horses munched on hay.
“They help us at parades and big events,” an officer explained.
One horse softly nuzzled a child’s hand.

Next, they met the property officer. She was carefully placing lost items, found treasures, and crime property onto shelves in a big storage room. "We keep everything safe," she said.

Then they visited the control room. A control room operator wore a headset and spoke into the radio. "I send officers where they are needed," she explained as the radio crackled softly.

Outside, they saw the police helicopter. Its blades were still.
“When it flies, it helps us search from the sky,” said the pilot.
The children looked up in amazement.

In the car park, Roads Policing showed their bright police car and flashing blue lights.

The children waved goodbye. "Thank you for helping everyone!" they said, smiling all the way back to school.
